

Darcy's Moon-tastic Day

By: Ella Ebey

Darcy's cyborg legs woke her up, just as she arrived at school. She almost rode the roller coaster, but Darcy needed the rest. As she walked up to her levitating school with the other kids, Darcy wondered what she would do today. Yesterday, the students tried to crack the code of flight. It didn't turn out well for Darcy, and she accidentally turned her friend into a unicorn. Her mind raced back to reality. With the rest of the students, Darcy bounced through the marshmallow hallways, and into the classes. When she got into Mr. Nuster's rocket science class, he greeted her with an ancient high five. Darcy found out the class would be trying to make a teleportation machine. Most of the class found this useless, since the year was 3085, and the majority of society could already teleport. That's how Darcy spent half her day. Sadly, there were only two subjects a day, not counting lunch.

After what seemed like a whole week, Darcy and the other students finally got out of school. Everyone played a new game, moon tag. It was exactly what it sounds like. It was tag on the moon! Once Darcy parachuted back to Earth, she went to bed, for a good 2 hours of sleep.

The End!